other details that have influenced the creation of this divine drink in Serbia. of the wines of Serbia things, on a large number of small producers. Understandably, their wine production is not so large and the sales are done in a limited number of places, but the mphasis is on quality. Since the produced quantity does not require special advertising, the potentia buver is often forced to explore a little bit in order to find them. The easiest way to reach them, and also a very pleasant one, is to follow the wine routes we suggest, which are clearly marked on the tourist map of wines and vinevards of Serbia.

Each wine region has at least one wine route, which follows local roads to the place where wine can be asted and bought. Such places are usually small farms surrounded by vineyards. Wine tourists are always welcome and well received here. Of course, the wines you will be able to try are properly chilled, and there is often a plate with bréad, cheese and smoked meat, or other specialties prepared in the traditional manner om local products. You will surely not make a mistake you choose a local wine with the local or regional erbian specialty, because it is certain that the wine and food have found a common language over the Many private wineries are located in rural areas and provide ideal conditions for rest. Quiet rural atmosphere is an excellent place to escape from urban life. A stay in the winery offers an opportunity to experience the vinevards life first hand. All wineries provide a taste of their wines. Duration of wine tours ranges from one hour to the half-day stay in the winery, giving visitors the opportunity to learn something about the process of wine production. Wine route also includes the natural beauty of the landscape through which it passes; cultural and historical heritage, tradition and special characteristics of the wine-growing region.

Wines of Serbia are dedicated to true connoisseurs those who put enjoyment before mere thirst. Let it be an inspiration for meeting new people and encouragement for fresh and valuable experiences.

It was built between 1964 and 1967. Shaped in the form of a Y, the Vršački Vinogradi cellar was a specific symbol of former Yugosla via. It is also one of the three biggest wine cellars in Europe, along with one in Listel (France) and Logroño (Spain). The wine cellar has five galleries — one underground and four above ground – containing 580 special concrete tanks lined with glass tiles.

Now, all they have to do is to use these gifts wisely. In the village of Krnjevo, just outside of Smederevo, grapevines are grown on the sandy and gravel strewn terrain. Here one can sample the wines from the "Mali Podrum Radovanović" (Small Cellar Radovanović), a winery that makes Chardonnay, Rhine Riesling and Cabernet Sauvignon, all of which rank among the top Serbian wines. The Radovanović family has been in the winemaking business for generations. This heritage and tradition formed the foundation of the company established in 1990. At that time a new 2.5 hectare vineyard was planted on the sandy terrain between the small hills of Mali Golac and Veliki Golac. This vineyard was planted facing southeast to absorb the first morning sunrays and be exposed to a steady circulation of warm air.
